

Jim Rinehart
EDTL 7100
Rationale for Curriculum Design
February 25, 2010

JRinehart_cmap on curriculum design

The personal relevance orientation best meet the needs of this project. The learner in this instance is a member of the education staff at MCI and NCCI. The learner is an educated individual who can assess his/her needs. The content of the professional development day will provide many opportunities for learning experiences for the staff members. With the staff development being held outside the institution, staff members will have a better environment for making choices about the information that is given to them. There will be periods of times that the learner will have to process the information. There will various activities for the learner to participate in and from these activities the learner will be able to take the information they need and process it. Staff members will be able to take other resources or references with them and process them at a later time.